TASMANIA

Tasmania has so much to offer junior doctors both personally and professionally. Working with the Tasmanian Department of Health and Human Services provides you with unique opportunities to develop your clinical skills, work in a range of settings and enjoy Tasmania's superb lifestyle choices or recreation pursuits.

You will find our dynamic small teams and lack of hierarchy inspiring, the scope of the work stimulating and the caseloads varied at our two major accredited teaching hospitals and in our new North West Area Health Service.

We value our people and appreciate the important introduction and foundation that our programs for junior doctors provide for working within the hospital system or your area of specialty. Each of our hospitals has something special and unique to offer; you get many real life hands on opportunities.

Our many advantages include:

- > Diverse practice settings
- > So many chances to develop practical skills
- > Excellent training opportunities
- > Small teams, supportive colleagues
- > Ready access to Consultants
- > Competitive employment benefits, including salary packaging and greater opportunity to take your leave when you want it
- > Free medical indemnity
- > Flexibility and worklife balance initiatives
- > A relaxed living (or adventurous) lifestyle
- > Support with visas and relocation
- > Ability to leave work and be just minutes from great beaches or recreation activities

Melinda Venn
Resident Medical Officer, Plastic Surgery,
Royal Hobart Hospital

"There is a public perception that it is just doing cosmetic work, whereas most of the time we spend doing things like trauma surgery for hands, hand surgery for arthritis, removing skin cancers, and we also do burns. Everything is pretty well supervised, we spend all our time working under the auspices of the consultants... the consultants are very friendly and approachable."

Pradeep Sanjamala
Resident Medical Officer,
North West Area Health Service

"It is the support and encouragement from the friendly staff who work across the North West Area Health Service's two hospitals that make it such a fantastic place to work"

Luke Mitchell
Registrar (DEM/Anaesthetics)
North West Regional Hospital

"The beauty of working in a small hospital is that there is greater opportunity to be involved in specialised procedures." While his mainland counterparts might be competing with a large number of junior doctors to be included in procedures, Luke said those opportunities were far easier to obtain at the North West Regional Hospital."
